National Museum of Mathematics (MoMath) Remains Open to the Public on July 4th to Celebrate Independence Day

MoMath welcomes families, tourists, and visitors of all ages to spend the holiday exploring the beauty and wonder of mathematics

Thursday, July 4 from 10 a.m. – 5 p.m.

New York, NY (June 27, 2019): The National Museum of Mathematics (MoMath), the only math museum in North America, will remain open to the public on July 4th to celebrate Independence Day on Thursday, July 4 from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. MoMath welcomes families, tourists, and visitors of all ages to spend the holiday exploring the beauty and wonder of mathematics at the Museum, located at 11 East 26th Street across from the popular Madison Square Park.

MoMath has attracted more than one million New Yorkers and visitors from around the world since it's opening in 2012 and fills an incredible and critical demand for hands-on math programming. The Museum offers a space where the math-challenged, as well as math enthusiasts of all backgrounds and levels of understanding, can enjoy the infinite and beautiful world of mathematics through more than 40 unique, state-of-the-art, interactive exhibits.

"We are thrilled to invite the public to come celebrate Independence Day with us at MoMath," said Cindy Lawrence, CEO and Executive Director of the Museum. "As we kick off the summer, I want to encourage visitors to expand their thinking beyond the textbook; dive more deeply into mathematics; and expose themselves to the evolving, creative, fun, human, and aesthetic nature of mathematics.”
